

Line, Dot, Dot, Line

The Anglo-Saxons loved to decorate metalwork with circles, lines and symbols. This decorative diamond-shaped strap end from the Museum of Croydon's collection is a great example!

What is a strap end?

A strap end is a piece of metal that's found at the end of a flat piece of leather or fabric, like a belt.

Design your own below using your favourite shapes and colours:

